FREAK ACCIDENT—Wrecker personnel work to lift a boat which collided with a van after its trailer separated from the truck towing it Thursday afternoon as sheriff's deputies divert traffic around the site. No one was injured in the accident. (Echo staff photo by Dena Bisnette)

Boat and van collide on 603

BY DENA BISNETTE

Nobody was hurt injured Thursday afternoon when a boat trailer came off its hitch and collided with a van at Central Avenue and Highway 603.

The accident did cause some diversion in traffic as Hancock County Sheriff's Department deputies and a state trooper directed vehicles around the site in order to allow wreckers to correct the problem.

Bill Pepperman, the deputy in charge at the site, explained that there were no charges involved as well as no injuries. "It was one of those freak things," he stated.

Richard Kolstad of Route Four, Bay St. Louis, was towing the boat, a 1988 Galaxy, behind his truck and was trying to turn left when the 4 p.m. accident occurred.

Pepperman said a winch line apparently broke, causing the load on the boat trailer to shift and pull the trailer loose from the hitch.

The nose of the boat struck the top driver's side corner of the van, which was approaching 603 from Central and was driven by Edwin J. Porche of Kenner, La. In addition, the trailer pierced the front driver's side tire. Pepperman said he did not know if any other damage was done.

A wrecker was summoned to lift the boat off the trailer and away from the van, then repositioned it on the trailer so that it could be moved out of the way of traffic.

Agencies sought to provide emergency food, housing

BY JANET MCQUEEN

Approximately $22,000 has been made available for emergency food and shelter for the needy through the Emergency Food and Shelter National Board Program, according to Jay Fleuriot, president of St. Vincent de Paul Society St. Clare conference.

Applications from non-profit agencies in Hancock County that wish to provide these services will be accepted Friday, January 12 at Coast Electric Power Association, US-90 and Main Street, Bay St. Louis. Representatives from respective agencies may appeal for funds to a local emergency food and shelter board at the CEPA office at 4 p.m. All board members, past and present, are encouraged to attend the meeting.

The local board has been set up to distribute $21,916 in federal funds in 1990. Agencies currently providing, or which are capable of providing shelter, food and supportive services for homeless and other needy people are eligible to apply for the money.

The program, which supplements and expands efforts to feed and shelter the homeless, is one of 18 related programs created by the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act, signed into law in 1987 and re-authorized in November 1988.

This year's award to Hancock County is $2,000 more than the previous year.

The local board consists of representatives of the United Way, Catholic Social Services (St. Vincent de Paul), American Red Cross, Community Action Agency and others.

For additional information, contact Fleuriot or Jeanne Garcia at 467-7609.

Berry halted again in quest for damages

The 5th U.S. Court of Appeals in New Orleans has denied a hearing for a man who is seeking damages from Hancock County for injuries he suffered in a fire he allegedly started in the Hancock County Jail in 1981.

Jack Berry, who claimed that he was awakened by smoke and flames while sleeping, claimed he did not know how the fire started and that jailers ignored his cries for help. Witnesses, however, said he started the fire to get attention.

The blaze that engulfed the mattress in his jail cell caused burns to 65 percent of Berry's body.

Berry, 26, of BaySide Park, has 40 days to file an appeal with the U.S. Supreme Court. While few cases ever make it to that court, Berry might have a better than average chance due to a 1987 U.S. Supreme Court case dealing with agreements not to sue.

Following the 1981 fire, Berry and his parents signed an agreement stating they would not sue for damages. After the agreement was made, the county paid approximately $27,000 in medical bills for him and dropped arson charges in connection with the fire and agreed to recommend probation in four other felony charges against him.

A federal jury in 1988 awarded Berry $200,000 but the 5th Circuit Court ruled that the agreement not to sue could be enforced.

The U.S. Supreme Courts case ended in a split vote, with four justices taking the position that such agreements are void in all cases, four saying they are good in all cases. One justice said it would be good in certain cases.

Attorneys expected a ruling from the New Orleans court within six weeks of hearing arguments in the case in June. The decision, however, took five months.

Drivers' letter sparks road work discussion

BY DENA BISNETTE

A "Letter to the Editor" from a group of school bus drivers became one of the major topic of discussion at Friday's meeting of the Hancock County Board of Supervisors, but Board President Ronald Cuevas said steps are being taken to clear up the problem the letter mentioned.

The letter, published in Thursday's edition of The Sea Coast Echo, was signed by 20 drivers and complained of "hazardous roads" the county had promised to fix.

The letter stated that as of Dec. 21, there had been no action on the problem.

Eddie Dantzy, head of transportation for the Hancock County School District, said he had contacted some of the drivers and learned that the "roads" to which the letter referred fell under the category of private roads and driveways used as school bus turnarounds, but not normally maintained by the county.

He said he plans to meet with the drivers to discuss the matter, but before doing so, plans further discussion with County Maintenance Superintendent Sam Cuevas.

The problem, Dantzy explained, was not that the county was unwilling to do the repairs. He said he had contacted Ronald Cuevas and Sam Cuevas to discuss the matter prior to the letter's publication after the drivers had complained to him regarding the conditions of some of the turnarounds.

Board Attorney Gerald Gex explained that the problem is actually a procedural one.

Private roads and driveways fall under Section 19-3-42 of the Mississippi Code, which states that one of the prerequisites for county work on such a turnaround is a formal request from the school board.

Gex said he does not know the specific date the required request was made, but knows it was not turned in to the supervisors until after the board's Nov. 28 meeting.

In other words, Gex explained, the request arrived too recently for the county to have been able to schedule and start any work on the turnarounds by Dec. 21.

He said he felt the letter was premature and was "an injustice to the county."

Due to the New Year's holiday, the board of supervisors has rescheduled its next meeting for 9 a.m. Tuesday.

Lombardos bound over to January Grand Jury

Fran Lombardo and her daughter, Mari, were bound over to the January Grand Jury Thursday after a hearing in which witnesses testified that Fran Lombardo had twice tried to get someone to pose as her husband for an insurance physical and had sought a hit man to kill him.

The women are accused of the Christmas 1985 murder of Frank Lombardo Jr., Fran's husband and Mari's father.

Frank Lombardo's body was found burned beyond recognition by firefighters who had extinguished a blaze that gutted his Bay St. Louis home.

A state medical examiner determined that Frank Lombardo had been shot twice in the chest and once in the top of the head.

The two Lombardo women collected $200,000 on a $100,000 insurance policy that paid double the face value if the insured died in a certain manner.

In Thursday's hearing, Jason Lombardo, 16, testified that his mother, Fran, 40, and sister, Mari, 21, told him his father had been murdered and his body burned hours before the fire was discovered.

Former Bay St. Louis Police Chief Ray Murphy testified that Lombardo's body bore no jewelry when it was discovered. Jason Lombardo testified that his mother had his father's horseshoe diamond ring about a year after his father died.

According to Murphy, Fran Lombardo told him Frank Lombardo had given her the ring to be cleaned several days before he was murdered. She later told police that it had been stolen. Lester Kohlberg of Picayune, who at the time administered physicals for insurance companies, testified that Fran Lombardo had approached him in 1985 about performing an insurance policy physical on a ringer because her husband was overweight and could not pass it.

He also testified that Fran Lombardo asked him if he could put her in touch with a hit man because she wanted to "get rid of her husband."

Donald Breland testified that he had agreed to take the examination but backed out because the nurse who was going to administer it knew him.

Winfield A. "Winkie" Strehle III, 31, of Harahan, La. was arrested earlier this month and charged with forgery for taking an examination for the $100,000 policy taken out on Frank Lombardo in late 1984.

WESTWARD EXPANSION

A wild and reckless spirit won the American West. Now that recklessness has come back to haunt those who live there today. Two programs airing on Mississippi ETV on Tuesday, Jan. 9, will examine the history and legacy of the government's Manifest Destiny policy.

"NOVA" reports on the century-old legacy of pollution from mining that poisons once-pristine waters of the Rocky Mountain states in "Poison in the Rockies" at 8 p.m.

Adding to the stress on the scarce water supply of the region are the more recent problems with acid rain and land development. And toxic debris from mines more than 100 years old is continuing to leak into mountain watersheds, threatening all who live downstream.

Then at 9, "The American Experience" recounts the origins of our nation's first major controversy over the use and abuse of untouched land. The debate erupted in 1906 over the building of a dam in Yosemite National Park, a protected reserve, creating a schism among environmentalists that endures today.

Highway Patrol urges use of seatbelts, moderation in alcohol consumption

Col. David R. Huggins, Highway Patrol chief, said the New Year's holiday period is an especially deadly time for motorists in Mississippi. Nineteen people were killed in 16 motor vehicle related crashes last Christmas and New Year's.

"None of the 19 who died were wearing seat belts," Huggins said.

"We are encouraging motorists to put safety first while traveling, and using seat belts is at the top of the list of safety measures to take. Seat belts save lives when they are worn properly," he advised.

Huggins also urges persons who may be planning parties to use every precaution to not contribute to serious injuries or deaths on streets and highways.

He suggests that if alcoholic beverages are served, hosts should encourage moderation and serve high protein foods. Recommendations for party giver include:

- Don't force drinks on guests. Some guests may not wish to appear rude and will accept drinks they don't want.
- Don't rush to refill guests' glasses just because they are empty.
- Have non-alcoholic beverages available for those who may not want to drink alcoholic beverages.

- Have several standard measures available, such as jiggers or self-measuring bottle spouts, to decrease the likelihood of someone drinking excessively.
- Offer coffee and other non-alcoholic beverages frequently beginning at least two hours before the party is over.

"If a host or hostess suspects that a guest has had too much to drink, that person should not be allowed to drive. It's best to suggest a designated driver, taxi or some other alternative transportation."

"The combination of drinking and driving is one of Mississippi's most serious highway safety problems. Holidays should be fun and festive, not ruined by serious injuries and deaths," Huggins added.

He said state troopers are working 1,320 extra hours during the Christmas and New Year's holidays through federally funded Operation Safe Highways projects.

Troopers will be manning roadblocks at various times and locations throughout the state looking for drivers under the influence of drugs or alcohol.

We hope people will remember that as of July 1, a fourth or subsequent DUI conviction (within a five year period) is a felony charge with 90 days in the state penitentiary, a $2,000 to $5,000 fine and a five-year license suspension (three years if a treatment program is completed).

"Persons whose driver's license, motor vehicle inspection sticker and/or license plate has expired should take whatever action is necessary to comply with the law," he warned.

If the weather permits, air surveillance units will be used to augment the ground units in locating stranded motorists and arresting drunken or reckless drivers.

Of the 19 motor vehicle deaths occurring during the holidays last year, 11 were killed in eight crashes during Christmas and eight were killed in eight crashes during New Year's. State troopers made 116 DUI arrests during the Christmas holidays and 160 DUI arrests during the New Year's holidays last year.

Drivers should consider taking along a blanket, flashlight and white handkerchief to tie on the antenna to alert an officer in the event their vehicle breaks down.

"If a person becomes stranded alongside the highway, he should tie a white piece of cloth or handkerchief to his vehicle's antenna and should stay in the vehicle until help arrives. Three of the eight people killed during the last New Year's holiday were pedestrians," Huggins said.

The New Year's holiday period begins at 6 p.m. on Friday, Dec. 29, and ends at midnight on Monday, Jan. 1. The Department of Public Safety offices will be closed on New Year's day.

Reflections

On Life

By Father Jerome
LeDoux, SVD

Holding court in death

"Just above my head, there's music in the air. I do believe that there's a God out there somewhere!"

Father Elmer Powell, SVD began many of his sermons and talks with these striking words. During his final three weeks on earth, he seemed to be looking above his head with increasing frequency, all the while holding court from his cancerous sickbed. As he was wont to be throughout life, he was still center stage.

Then came Ada Simond, my 86-year-old cousin, who weathered a stroke temporarily to continue probing into family history and current matters from her room in St. Anthony's Hospital in Augustin. Almost up to her last hours, her history-filled mind challenged those around her to recollection and excellence. Yes, she, too, was holding court, even as death moved in on her.

At this point, Yogi Berra would add, "Then it was deja vu all over again;" for Theresa Lazard was holding court.

She had fought cancer for two years, battling her way through the hassles of chemotherapy and radiation treatments. In the final several months of her ordeal, the futility of treatment gave way to painkillers which made her at least somewhat comfortable.

Compassionate Hospice workers had gently informed one of her sisters that the family should celebrate Christmas early, implying that Theresa would not be around for the Lord's birthday.

Now the day had come when the doctor gave her three hours, maybe the night, to live. As relatives and friends descended upon her home to say their fond good-byes, she held court. Piercing the shroud of her extreme weakness, she recognized all comers and returned their, "I love you" with her own "I love you."

One friend, Betty, who introduced herself by name, was stunned to see herself instantly recognized and paid the compliment by one supposedly at death's door: "I like your hair that way."

It was one of the eeriest settings I have ever seen in my life. Everyone knew what the doctor had said. We all saw Theresa's sunken cheeks, frequently rolled-back eyes and totally wan manner. Surely, the handwriting was unmistakably on the wall.

Still, it did not seem to be a scene of dying, but some out-of-the-ordinary, surreal scene of living. As listless and as weak as Theresa was, she consistently perked up whenever one of her children called for her attention or whenever she heard a child cry.

Yes, she was holding court in death, but it seemed much more that she was holding court in life and its promises.

At one point, she became completely animated when she saw her three children present. Marshaling all her strength, she gazed intently at her son and charged him:

"Randy, finish your schooling, and take care of your sisters!"

Then, her gaze took in Tracy and Paula as well: "I'm going to heaven, and you will come to meet me if you're good!"

Three hours came and went, making a weak prophet of the doctor. Throughout, Theresa held court, seemingly never tiring of entertaining those who came a last time to say, "I love you."

Further electrifying the atmosphere were her sisters who hung closer than any nurse would, and charged the room with their love. One of them, Eva, seemed to interpret the minds and the hearts of all of them when she sighed in great candor: "I wish I could draw all of her pain to myself!"

Definitely, it was Christmas all over again: the manifest love of God for us in the coming of Jesus the Savior.

"QUOTABLE QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

As we begin 1990 there are a few wishes I have for Hancock County and would like to mention.

Most important I would like to see more jobs available for Hancock County residents.

A few new or expanded industries would be very helpful in this matter.

Many of us would like to see a beautiful sand beach along our shores. A new beach is being addressed, but, it seems there is always a hang up or two which causes a delay.

Excellence in education for our youth is a wish many of our residents express. This is necessary if our students are going to be able to compete with those from other areas.

No matter how good our educational systems are, we must strive to be better.

I would also like to see a better working relationship between our cities, communities and county.

Tremendous improvements have been made in recent years, yet more improvements are needed.

It would be nice to see better roads throughout the area. I hear residents constantly complaining about road conditions.

I will close with one of my favorite complaints. I would like to see our highways and roadways free of cars and trucks with only one headlight at night in 1990.

This is the time when many folks will be attending parties and some will be celebrating a bit too much.

If you are one of those who likes to drink, I recommended that you do not drive, as all police will be looking for drunk drivers on the roadways and highways.

Laws are very strict on drunk driving and it doesn't take very much alcohol to be considered drunk in Mississippi.

A designated driver is one way some folks avoid having to drive while drinking.

I hope everyone will have a safe and Happy New Year.

Mississippians should all be proud of the Ole Miss Rebels after their upset victory over Air Force in the Liberty Bowl.

It was a very exciting game and the first entire college game I watched this season.

Ole Miss could really score touchdowns fast. They bogged down a bit in the third quarter before coming back in the fourth for the victory.

I hope you haven't forgotten to prepare those New Year's resolutions which most will break before the end of the first week.

It seems every year that I am going to diet a bit and I get started but never really loose too much weight and then regain what I have lost.

The weather has been so bad in recent weeks that I haven't been able to do too much walking at the Fitness Track. Hopefully I will be able to start walking in the weeks ahead.

The many holiday treats all seem to add on a little extra weight, so I will need to drop a few pounds in January.

I realize this may not be the time to mention Mardi Gras, but, the annual Krewe of Nereids parade is scheduled for Sunday, February 18.

The Krewe of Hancock truck parade will follow Nereids. Groups wishing to participate with floats or marching units must register prior to parade day.

It is a big fun time for those who participate in Mardi Gras parades.

Those interested in participating in the annual parade can contact Jeanette Handshoe, P.O. Box 2501, Bay St. Louis, MS. 39521.

Just think, it will soon be parade time.

A special issue on the Favre Family by Jerry Heitzmann is hot off the press.

The publication is sponsored by the Mississippi Coast Historical and Genealogical Society and contains 136 pages.

Jerry reports he worked some ten years on the publication and it includes many of the residents along the Mississippi and Alabama coasts.

The book begins with Jean Favre of the early 1700's when he arrived from France.

Among other local family names in the book are; LaFontaine, Murphy, Bourgeois, Nécaise, Carver, Ladner and Fayard to name a few.

Those interested in the publication can contact Heitzmann at the Beach Boulevard Branch of Hancock Bank.

PEACE, PROSPERITY &
JOY IN THE NEW YEAR

FROM THE CAPITOL

By Governor Ray Mabus

1989 was a year of great strides for state

In just a few days, Mississippians will celebrate one of the most successful years we've ever experienced.

1989 was a year of great strides, incredible accomplishments and good news. And it began before we even put the finishing touches on 1988.

Over a year ago, our office received word that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration was looking to Mississippi to help build the newest generation of space travel. Immediately, we began a year-long fight and won the right to help NASA in their quest to build the latest line of solid rocket engines.

We proved that when high-tech wants high-quality, they come to Mississippi.

As a result of our efforts, billions of dollars will be coming to our state as we convert the old Yellow Creek Nuclear Power Plant into the home of the next wave of space flight.

That means thousands of jobs for Mississippians—and a major boost to our state's economy.

In 1989, we also embarked on the most ambitious education reform program in the nation. Mississippi's BEST—or Better Education for Success Tomorrow—charts a roadmap for the future in education.

Just one day after we celebrate New Year's Day, 1990, our State Legislature returns to Jackson to begin work on the nation's first education reform program to follow the Presidential Summit on Education. We have the opportunity to lead the nation when it comes to this issue. But, more importantly, we have the chance to make future generations of Mississippians proud of our foresight, leadership and unerring resolve on a matter that affects us all.

We can't afford to delay. If we do, we risk coming in last, rather than weighing in first. We also lose the chance to give our children the opportunity to harness tomorrow's dreams. In the days ahead, I urge you to make your voice heard to your Legislators. Tell them that we have discussed, debated and delayed long enough. Now is the time to make a lasting imprint on tomorrow by standing tall for education today.

In Mississippi, we can meet the future with our eyes open, our minds clear and our workforce prepared. The door is beginning to open to one of the most exciting eras in Mississippi's history. It's an era that can be marked by unparalleled growth, unstoppable potential, and unmatched opportunity. And it's an era where we can write our own future, unbridled by ignorance.

In a phrase, we are opening the door to "The Education Era."

This next year, let the history books write that we have taken the first steps toward making the 1990's Mississippi's BEST. By reforming our system of education, we will ensure the next generation a place on the global storefront with our doors open, and our shelves full of prosperity, success, competition and inspiration.

By reforming education, we will be putting a big sign on every border that tells the world, "Mississippi is open for business," and that means better days ahead for all of us and, most importantly, for all our children.

Julie and I wish everyone a prosperous and peaceful New Year.

EYES ON MISSISSIPPI

Attorney General Patterson served state during trying times

The other day I was recalling some of the rare courageous figures who have walked across the state's political stage the past 40 years.

My thoughts naturally went back to Joe T. Patterson, who was the state's attorney general in the late 1950s and 60s. Significantly, Patterson died 20 years ago this year.

He was not one of the fire-eaters during the days when it was in vogue for the state's politicians to play the politics of race to the hilt. He was almost voted out of office because he didn't demagogue.

As the state's attorney general during the years when Mississippi made its last ditch stand to maintain "legal" segregation, Patterson had the unenviable job of trying to defend laws stacked on the books by the Legislature.

His most trying days came during the 1962 James Meredith-Ole Miss crisis when he was caught in the middle between the bitter-end tactics of Ross Barnett and the persistent force of the federal government. Patterson was always devoted to the law and the findings of the court, no matter how bitter. His word was his bond.

This inevitably brought Patterson into conflict with Barnett who had led the people to believe he had some grand plan that would thwart the federal government and Meredith. Patterson disagreed with many of Barnett's tactics and with those who had Barnett's ear during the crisis.

When Meredith had received a final court order to be enrolled at Ole Miss, Patterson was asked by Barnett to serve as intermediary with the U.S. Justice Department to find out when Meredith would be brought to the campus.

Patterson was acquainted with Burke Marshall, then the top assistant to Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy. He said he would contact Marshall and lay out the ground rules for when Meredith arrived.

Barnett made clear he would personally turn Meredith away and refuse to enroll him by invoking the doctrine of interposition, thereby setting a legal test on the governor's intervention. This message was conveyed to Marshall by Patterson.

Marshall's primary concern was that Meredith would be adequately protected and not harmed. Patterson gave his word that Meredith would be safe and would be allowed to leave under protection after he was turned away.

Later, Patterson learned that Barnett, who had been in a strategy meeting, did not intend to carry out the agreement as had been outlined to Marshall. Someone had persuaded Barnett that Meredith should be arrested on a trumped up charge and be taken away from the federal authorities.

Some, it was learned later, had even advocated that the federal marshals be arrested if they tried to interfere.

Patterson took it upon himself to call Marshall and tell him that their agreement was off, because Barnett had plans to arrest Meredith on his arrival. He reported his conversation with Marshall to Barnett.

Several of Barnett's strategy advisers were furious and called Patterson a "traitor."

But Patterson held to his guns and Barnett finally came around to the position that he would see to it that Meredith was not arrested.

Out of this dramatic behind-the-scenes episode came threats from bitter-end segregationists vowing they would defeat Patterson in the next election. Some tried to get Barnett to find a way to remove Patterson from office.

The White Citizens Council fielded a candidate and threw everything they could into the 1963 election to try and unseat Patterson.

Patterson's surprising reelection that year, many thought later, was due to the confidence the people had in him, not as a headline-grabber or a ranting politician, but as a steady hand.

Joe Patterson survived the mania of the time, and he lived to see some of the old fire-eaters descend into political oblivion.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Our 'rights' are sometimes taken to the extreme

Dear Editor:

Aren't you just a bit tired of the words activist and civil rights?

Every day the news is littered with stories on this or that group claiming their "rights" have been violated (unrelated to race).

School kids think they have the right to determine dress code, hair length, even the subjects being offered. Perhaps what they really need is a tour of duty in the military since their parents failed to teach them respect for law and order (rules) or citizenship.

Here's an instance of how far out "causes" have gone: A news story recently said parents of a 5-year old kindergarten student will sue their School Board because their child's right to free speech was violated. They'd informed their child "There is no Santa," he told his classmates, upsetting some, so his teacher told him to stop telling other children. His civil rights were violated—how ridiculous!

Unlike totalitarian countries, we have a non-violent process to change rules and laws—through the courts and the ballot (even the PTA).

With world peace now a possibility and the Christmas Season here, let's make a New Year's resolution to be better citizens.

Greetings

The 80s are over, but—what comes with the 90s?

Today is New Year's Eve; a new decade opens at midnight. Should we reflect on the 1980s as we leave them or on the 1990s as we enter them?

My husband Joe and I recently watched one of those programs which consists of a commentator's voice over news footage shot between Jan. 1, 1980 and the day the program was produced.

It was pretty good, beginning with the hostages being released by Iran and ending with the Berlin Wall being opened up.

Maybe those programs don't cover everything, but I think they do fine regarding news and entertainment. I like the magazines too, like Life and its pictorial look at the decade.

Then, of course, we all have personal memories: during the 80s, I graduated from college, bought a car, "found" what I now consider my real home on the Gulf Coast and my present job, acquired the pet I always wanted, started on my master's degree and married my husband.

Some memories weren't so good: the oil boom went bust and affected the area where I lived, and for many people like me, the only solution was to leave to find work. I lost a couple of friends who died. The transmission fell out of my first car and buying a second one caused financial hardship.

When you look at something as long as a decade, there's going to be some bad with the good.

But, what will the 1990s bring? If we believe the imagination of movie directors, we'll have visitors from another planet, more rampant consumerism, kids who take over the world with computers, major pollution problems and maybe even a nuclear war.

Let's get real—1984 came, but Big Brother didn't, and if he did, no one can tell because he works as an IRS auditor.

We can look at some of these things, based on the trends that have developed in the decade that led up to tonight, a decade when Guy Lombardo was an unfamiliar name to many folks celebrating New Year's Eve and when the world's oldest living teenager, Dick Clark, finally retired.

The E.T.s from another planet haven't officially arrived, but we don't need them. We have plenty of people who act like they're from another planet. I don't know where they live, but they find their way to New Orleans every Mardi Gras.

As far as nuclear war is concerned, who's going to be left to tell about it if it does happen, if you believe news reports about the weaponry available now?

The kids, who will have been raised on computers, will probably just think it's another game until it's too late. And as for taking over the world, these better-educated youngsters who have been looking at their monitors all day will probably be too busy checking out the other screen—television.

And, there's always the chance we'll generate so much pollution we won't be able to fit all the garbage on barges and er laces and fast food was so fast it was dehydrated.

Maybe the guys who thought that up weren't too far wrong, if the trend from the 1980s continues. There are some neat gadgets out there, but if you buy one, the new, improved model is almost guaranteed to come out as soon as your payments are finished.

I know there are people who make a business of making predictions, but I won't try to guess what the 90s will bring. I'll only say they'll fly by just as fast as the 80s did, and that you're guaranteed at least 10 New Year's Eves.

Unless, of course, some kid with the latest computer gadget goes to the Mardi Gras and rescues an E.T., who uses the computer to figure out how to turn garbage into nuclear energy and winds up blowing us away in the process—and watch the movie commercials in the 90s, so you can be the first one in your neighborhood to see it.

Hey, Steven Spielberg, how does that plot grab you? Happy 1990s.

Early tax payments pass $1 million mark

BY DENA BISNETTE
The Hancock County Tax Collector and Assessor's Office believes in giving people a chance for an early start.

That chance is given in the form of early tax collections. According to Tax Collector and Assessor Edward Murtagh, "People appreciate being able to pay early."

Each year, Murtagh asks the board of supervisors for permission to begin collecting annual property taxes on Dec. 1, a month before the state-mandated opening date, Jan. 1.

As of Thursday, the total already collected was $1,089,808. That total breaks down into $815,307 for the county itself and $274,500 for Bay St. Louis under a cooperative agreement established several years ago to allow people to pay all their property taxes in one location.

Murtagh said response this year has been about the same, or slightly better, than last year.

"We had mail coming in as early as the first of October or November," he said.

He attributes part of the interest in paying early to the fact that if a person pays his 1989 taxes before the end of 1989, the amount can be deducted from his 1989 income taxes.

The early payments generate interest for the county. In addition, it prevents a possible cash flow problem which could occur this time of year because the part of the money which is not turned over to the state can be turned over to the county immediately after Jan. 1, instead of during February.

In a related matter, the tax office plans to send out homestead exemptions this week.

The exemptions give people who are eligible a break on their property taxes, and anyone who does not receive a notice within the next couple of weeks but believes he is eligible should call the office at 467-1669 or 467-4425.

Gemmel to replace Smith as commissioner

Special to the Echo
Daniel W. Smith of Diamondhead submitted his resignation as commissioner of the Diamondhead Water and Sewer District to the Hancock County Board of Supervisors Dec. 11. Smith is credited with originating and organizing the effort that resulted in the creation of the district.

Acting on the recommendation of the commissioners, the supervisors selected W. J. (Bill) Gemmel as his successor effective Dec. 22. Gemmel will continue to serve as secretary

The commissioners named Dick Nolan chairman.

Members of the board and their attorney have met several times with Peter J. Casano III to arrange the purchase of the water and sewer systems from Diamondhead Utility Company Inc., which Casano controls. They seek to negotiate a price that will be fair to the rate payers of Diamondhead as well as to the utility company.

The commissioners met recently with Holcomb Hector of Purcell Company to affirm the district's interest in the future development of the community. An effort will be made to give like information to the Diamondhead Property Owners in the near future.

Arrangements are underway with a local bank for interim funds to use until permanent funds are available. Contacts have been made for low interest-long term funds for the acquisition of the systems and their improvement. This includes a central disposal plant and interconnection of the north and south water systems.

Interviews of engineers and accounting personnel experienced in both water and sewer systems have been accomplished. District meetings, which are open to the public, are usually held at 7 p.m. Monday evenings at the Molokai office at the intersection of East Diamondhead and Golf Club Drives.

Catalogs provide relief during gardening slump

By Dr. Milo Burnham

Horticulturist
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

Can you believe that before the end of November, I'd already received two 1990 seed catalogs? I'm not even serious about Christmas shopping yet, and now I'm supposed to be thinking about what I want to plant next year.

Keep the catalogs you receive in a safe place, because if you are like me, we'll be lucky if we can even find these catalogs after the Christmas wrappings are discarded and the tree ornaments are put up for another year.

When Christmas becomes too hectic, just looking through a catalog can be good therapy.

Gardening enthusiasm at this time of year tends to be at the second low point in its yearly cycle. The first low point usually comes in summer when everything needs picking, canning or freezing.

It's hot, and the weeds, insects and diseases are taking over the garden. All this happens about the time you get invited for a week at the beach or a nice resort.

The second low—the winter low—has got to be those few weeks surrounding the end of one year and the beginning of another year. Just because you can't be out working in the garden, doesn't mean you shouldn't be thinking about it.

Seed companies don't like lows in gardening enthusiasm or for you not to be thinking about gardening. So, just as you begin to unwind and let down, the seed companies do something to wind you up again. They mail out the new catalogs.

To be honest, this is good business because southern gardens are idle for a relatively short time. With planting of cool season vegetables beginning in late January or early February, the catalogs have to arrive in November or December to allow time for placing and receiving seed orders.

Seed companies probably also make regional mailings so southern gardeners receive their catalogs several weeks before northern gardeners.

If you'd like to receive some 1990 seed catalogs, look for ads in the gardening magazines or those magazines featuring home-type or do-it-yourself activities.

Most seed companies offer free catalogs. Those that charge may credit the catalog charge to you if you place an order.

Looking through the new 1990 seed catalogs you'll notice a lot of color. There seems to be more color pictures of both vegetables and flowers. The catalogs contain many varieties designated as new or exclusive.

The new may be either brand new or just new to the catalog. Exclusive means available only from that company. The All American Selections are clearly marked in most catalogs. Look for AAS or the logo.

If space devoted to herb seeds and plants can be used as a measure, herbs seem to be holding their popularity. Among the flowers, perennials are continuing their climb in popularity as indicated by the number of flowering perennial seeds listed in the catalogs.

Look through the tool and equipment sections of the catalogs for the latest in gardening gadgets. There probably isn't time to order a Christmas gift, but what you see may be available locally at a garden supply store or garden center.

Actually, I'm kind of glad the catalogs have started arriving. I'd rather get a free seed catalog than a bill any day. Also, it's kind of nice to be able to retreat from the Christmas rush and dream about next year's garden.

You don't have to order, just look, read, dream and enjoy. If the catalogs are coming, can spring be very far behind?

Waltz into the New Year

Waltzing into the New Year to the music of the Johann Strauss family has been a Viennese tradition since the early 1800s, and once again, Mississippi ETV will bring this holiday pleasure to Mississippians when "From Vienna: The New Year's Celebration 1990" is broadcast on ETV and PRM beginning at 8 p.m., on New Year's Day.

Hosted by former CBS anchor Walter Cronkite, the 90-minute program features the Vienna Philharmonic with guest conductor Zubin Mehta, performing a mix of waltzes, polkas and galops by the Strauss family.

Then at 9, "Wolf Trap Presents Victor Borge: an 80th Birthday Celebration" features the "Great Dane" being feted at an elegant party of music and laughter.

The program features Anna Moffo hosting Robert Merrill, the Canadian Brass, Soprano Stephanie Conte and coloratura Marylyn Mulvey. It will also be simulcast.

There are also cameos by Billy Crystal, Lena Horne, Buddy Hackett, Sammy Cahn, Claire Trevor, Nipsey Russell, Skitch

Hancock County Historical Society

BY PAGE POOLSON

The challenge of this column is going to be in reporting on what our busy active members are doing, where they are going, and what they are seeing that will, perhaps, be interesting to you and that you may wish to sometime in the future do, go to, or see for yourself. Sound good? We hope so.

If you are not yet a member of our fast growing organization, you are missing out on knowing of the notable happenings of our areas grass roots and development which in themselves, can be surprisingly interesting ... of the opportunity of bonding socially with the friendliest of fellow members ... and of enjoying delightful monthly luncheons served graciously in our own Bay-Waveland Yacht Club while learning, vicariously, of varied and appealing subjects brought to us by eloquently knowledgeable speakers.

We also have a charming little Antique Shoppe, compliments (and neighbors) of Ruth's Bakery on Court Street. We think you will find the inventory as tantalizing as any of the shops you have already visited and you might just find that one wished for item that has eluded you for eons.

As an enrollee of the "Historical Society", you are entitled to receive our newsletter that tells of the upcoming meeting and newsy news of other internal events. You get to be in this space once in a while, which is a lot of fun too!

Come join us, if you can, but be sure to read this paper each week for a look back on the past, an observance of the traveling tidbits and a whole lot more that may just make your day ... along the choppy way.

Mental Health Association

The public is invited to attend the annual Mental Health Association luncheon on Tuesday, Jan. 9 at the Biloxi Hilton-Topaz Room. Joe Meadows, local attorney, will address the group on the subject "Our Responsibilities—the Year of the Child."

Meadows recently completed an appointment as interim district attorney for Harrison, Hancock and Stone counties and has just been named as the new attorney for the Harrison County Board of Supervisors.

Officers to be installed are Judy Wells, president; Norman Graham, president-elect; Marguerite Van Dyke, secretary; Don Penrod, treasurer; and R. Elaine Schmidtling, president-past.

Board members are Col. (Ret.) Stephen F. Farry, Paul and Marilyn Lacy, Jane Bennett, Bill McKee, Major Benjamin Tandy, Larry and Dorothy Cunningham, Cora Balmat, Wayne Haggerty and Doris Lewis.

The National Mental Health Association has adopted the theme for 1990 as "The Year of the Child," recognizing the need to improve services for the more than eight million children and adolescents with serious emotional problems in our country. Unfortunately, most of them don't get help.

There are countless numbers who have difficulty coping with daily living.

Reservations for the annual luncheon can be made by calling the Mental Health Association at 864-6274. Cost of the luncheon is $2. The check can be mailed to the Mental Health Association in Harrison County, Opal Smith Fellowship Center, P.O. Box 7329, Gulfport, MS 39506.

NEW TOPS CHAPTER

Formation of a new TOPS (Take Off Pounds Sensibly) chapter scheduled to meet at Hancock Medical Center has been delayed until after the holiday season.

The first meeting will be at 6:30 p.m. on Jan. 3.

American Cancer Society

The American Cancer Society will bring a touch of spring to the Bay-Waveland area the first week in March 1990 when it conducts Daffodil Day.

This fund-raising event will bring the first flower of spring to friends, neighbors, customers and employees.

The key to the success of this event is the contribution from the local business community. The Hancock County Unit of the American Cancer Society will deliver the flowers to offices, stores or to whomever one chooses to receive the daffodils.

Many companies purchase the flowers and ask that they be donated to the local hospital, the nearest nursing or private care facility, or to a church or school group.

The minimum order is one case (500 cut flowers per case). A donation of $150 per case will help fund cancer research, general education programs and numerous services for patients. For more information, contact Kathy Fernandez at 467-6535.

Service Corps of Retired Executives

The third annual achievement awards program, sponsored by the SBA's Service Corps of Retired Executives, has honored four coastal business establishments for progress made in 1989.

Winners are Goodwill Industries of Southern Mississippi, Leroy J. Modenbach Jr., executive director; Camara Prestwood Young, Leisure Lady Lingerie Boutique, Biloxi; Orlando Grovesnor, Neighborhood Cleaners, Gulfport; and Carole and Craig Ruckman, Coast Advertising Specialties, Gulfport.

Awards are based on success in starting a business, as in the case of Coast Advertising Specialties, or evidence of significant progress in improving or expanding an established enterprise. The SCORE tie-in involves services provided by its counselors, which is available at no cost to the client.

"With signs of unsteadiness in the 1990 business climate, we anticipate increasing needs for counseling in 1990, and we're ready to help at any time," said SCORE chairman Henry Schwager. "Just call us at any time at 863-4449."

Pass Christian Senior Citizens

The Pass Christian Senior Citizens Center donated 15 beautiful afghans to patients at the Miramar Nursing Home. The afghans were crocheted by Anita Ratford, Emily Bryant, Margaret Holley, Ethel McKay, Armenta Hall, Victoria Webb and Mildred Tennette. Their instructor was Anna Meyer from the center.

The afghans were given on Dec. 20 by Mrs. Ratford, Bryant, Holley, McKay and Mary Davis. All the patients were pleased to receive such a nice gift.

Decade of gardening brings many changes

By Dr. Milo Burnham
Horticulturist
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

In this last column of the year and the 1980s, I want to thank you for your interest and support during the past several years the column has been published. I hope the information provided and the topics chosen have not only proven interesting, but also helped you enjoy gardens a little more and made them a little more successful. Looking back over 1989 and the earlier years of the decade, we've seen a lot of changes in gardening practices and the varieties of plants we grow and enjoy. Consider the weather—there have been good gardening years, and there have been those we'd all like to forget.

Remember 1980? We experienced one of the hottest summers on record. It was week after week of temperatures hovering around 100 degrees accompanied by a real shortage of rain. Despite the weather, I grew that fall my best crops of short of rain, a wet 1989 more than made up for it. It was just a few short months ago that tomato plants and whole gardens all over the state were drowning because of the frequent and heavy rains.

caused any problems in the state. Suddenly the disease showed up and took just about everyone's tomatoes. After its initial appearance, we experienced years of light infection of spotted-wilt virus and then years like 1989, when it was quite evident.

Culinary herbs, such as garlic, parsley and sage, have always been popular with gardeners, but interest in the other culinary herbs had been relatively low for many years.

Dietary changes, however, resulting from increased evidence of the effects of what we eat on human health caused an explosion of interest in herbs and herb gardening. Herb seeds and plants now are widely available, and this situation will very likely continue.

One of the biggest changes experienced in vegetable varieties during the 1980s was in sweet corn. The super sweets and hybrids with the sugary enhancer gene took over the sweet corn seed market.

There are still good varieties of normal sweet corn available, but the seed companies are constantly developing new hybrids with higher sugar content and greater quality-holding capacity on the plant. In addition to the white and yellow sweet corns, the bicolors have made a place for themselves with gardeners.

There's been a tremendous increase in interest in using fewer chemicals for disease and insect control and a move toward a more organic approach.

Much of this directional change has come about as a result of charges against the pesticides gardeners have been using, an increasing public interest in the environment and a greater availability of some biological controls.

Right or wrong, we will see in the 1990s an even stronger push toward limiting the use of chemical pesticides and fewer pesticides available for use.

I suspect we've got a rough road ahead of us when trying to control insects and diseases in our gardens since new control measures are not being developed as rapidly as we are losing our traditional methods.

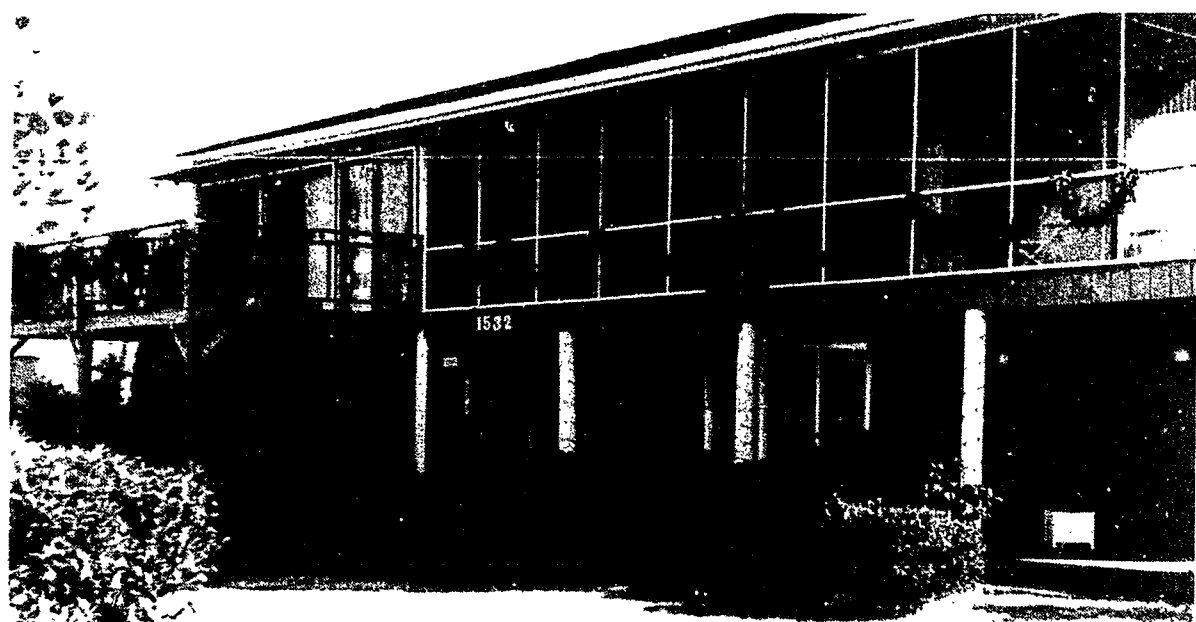

More gardeners are using mulches, plastic and organic types and some gardeners have started trying plastic row covers and the non-woven floating row covers.

The drought of 1980 was nothing compared to the drought of 1988. In 1988 was Let's Break A Holiday Tradition!

THE SEA COAST ECHO—SUNDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1989-9A

Every year at this time, we're barraged from all sides by "Don't drink and drive" messages. That's still the best advice — but unfortunately, not enough of us take it seriously. And, because we don't, hundreds of people will die in alcohol-related accidents during the New Year's holiday period.

New Year's is traditionally a time of celebration. That means there are going to be lots of parties — and a scary number of inebriated drivers on our streets and highways.

If you care about yourself, you won't drink and drive. And, if you care about your friends, you won't let them drive while under the influence.

Let's break a holiday tradition — the tradition of carnage on our highways because of an alcohol-related accident! Watch out for the other guy and know your own limits and take care of yourself!

Let's let this tradition fade away into history!

PLEASE DON'T DRINK & DRIVE

This serious holiday message has been brought to you by the following community businesses who extend the warmest of holiday greetings to friends and neighbors everywhere:

SHOPPING UP A STORM

By Katy McGuire
Caire

With thoughts turning to New Year's Day and its special traditions, area supermarkets are well stocked with the special food items which we need to bring us good luck and good fortune in the New Year.

Customs vary somewhat from place to place and country to country, of course, but most of us agree that blackeye peas and cabbage and collard greens or another "good green" give us a good start on 1990!

All our area stores are brimming with dried blackeye peas, and for those who don't wish to go to the trouble of cooking the peas, there are specials on canned blackeye peas as well. Whether you opt for the old-time traditional hog jowl to season the peas, or choose bacon or ham or salt pork, you'll find supplies aplenty at all the meat counters.

And, rice is offered at special prices all around the stores, for combining with the peas in that old South Carolina dish, "Hop-pin' John" (recipe in last Thursday's "Cooking Up a Storm") or in other dishes, for instance:

ZESTY MEXICAN RICE
 1 cup butter or margarine
 1 cup chopped onion
 4 cups cooked rice
 2 cups commercial sour cream
 1 cup cream-style cottage cheese
 3 (4 oz.) cans chopped green chilies, drained
 2 cups (8 oz.) shredded sharp Cheddar cheese
 1 bay leaf, crumbled
 1 tsb. salt
 1 tsb. pepper

Melt the butter in a large saucepan. Add the onion, and saute until tender, then remove from the heat and stir in the rice, sour cream, cottage cheese, bay leaf, salt and pepper.

Spoon half the rice mixture into a lightly greased 2-quart casserole, and top with half the chilies and cheese. Repeat the layers except for cheese. Bake at 375 degrees, uncovered, for 20 minutes. Sprinkle with remaining cheese, and bake for an additional five minutes. (8 to 10 servings). — From "Southern Living Magazine."

This would be a good accompaniment to baked ham or pork roast or whatever on the buffet table on New Year's Day. You wouldn't have to serve much else but dips and snacks for munching while watching the football games!

Speaking of "munchies" — if you really don't care for blackeye peas, but are still superstitious enough (like most of us) to eat at least a bit of the peas on New Year's Day for luck, why not sample this cocktail tray

tidbit

MARINATED BLACKEYE PEAS

Cooked blackeye peas (2 cups or so) or a can of the peas
 Cooked blackeye peas (2 cups or so) or a can of the peas

1 rib celery
 1 tomato, chopped or diced
 1 Tbsp. chopped onion, or a bit more

1 Tbsp. salad oil
 1 Tbsp. vinegar
 Hot pepper sauce, cayenne pepper as desired.

To the drained peas, add chopped celery and onion.

Combine the oil, vinegar, salt and cayenne and mix well. Pour over the peas, stirring gently to mix. Chill in refrigerator. Add the tomato pieces at serving time, mixing in gently. This is tasty as a relish with ham or other meats, or, served with cocktail picks, as a New Year's addition to the appetizer tray.

And, remember that cabbage for New Year's for prosperity, also the greens, especially collard greens, to ensure that green "folding money" in the coming year!

Holiday cheesecake offers elegance

From deep within Germany's famous Black Forest comes the inspiration for a romantic, Old-World dessert to grace your holiday table.

In Black Forest Cheesecake, luscious swirls of chocolate wind through cherry-studded layers of creamy sweetness. Cherry juice tints the sour cream topping a festive pink.

You don't have to be a master baker to create this elegant cake. The marbling effect is easily achieved by dividing the batter, then adding melted chocolate to one bowl and chopped maraschino cherries to the other.

Layer the batters over the crust in the pan and carefully swirl with a thin spatula.

Remember that cheesecake is best served well chilled, to allow it to firm and the flavors to meld. To make chocolate curls for garnishing, use a bar of chocolate at room temperature.

Hold over wax paper and use a sharp vegetable peeler to shave the bar into thin curls. Refrigerate or freeze the curls until you're ready to use them.

BLACK FOREST CHEESECAKE

3 tablespoons butter, melted
 1 cup chocolate wafer crumbs (about 20 wafers)

4 packages (8 oz. each) cream cheese, softened

1 1/2 cups sugar

1 1/4 cup flour

1 tablespoon cherry-flavored brandy

1 teaspoon vanilla

6 eggs

1 jar (10 oz.) maraschino cherries, drained and chopped, reserving juice

3/4 cup (4 oz.) semi-sweet chocolate morsels, melted

1 cup dairy sour cream

2 tablespoons sugar

Chocolate curls, optional

Stir together butter and crumbs until thoroughly blended. Press crumb mixture onto bottom of lightly greased 9 x 9-inch springform pan. Set aside.

In large mixing bowl, beat together cream cheese, 1 1/2 cups sugar, flour, brandy and vanilla until fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time beating well after each addition.

Pour about 1/3 of the batter into a small mixing bowl. Beat drained, chopped cherries into batter in large bowl until well combined. Set aside. Beat chocolate into batter in small bowl until evenly blended.

Pour about half of cherry batter into prepared pan. Spread with all of chocolate batter. Top with remaining cherry batter.

With thin spatula or knife, gently swirl through batter to create marbled effect. Bake in preheated 350° F. oven until knife inserted near center comes out clean, about 1 hour, 20 minutes. Cool on wire rack 10 minutes.

In clean small bowl, blend together sour cream, 2 tablespoons sugar and 2 tablespoons reserved cherry juice. Spread evenly over cake. Bake an additional 5 minutes.

Cool on wire rack 1 hour. Refrigerate until firm, at least 8 hours or overnight. To serve, remove rim of pan and cut cake into wedges. Garnish with chocolate curls, if desired.
